

PROTECT ANIMALS, IT'S THE LAW!

There is a law on the books of the Commonwealth of Mass., Chapter 272, Section 77, which states that you must provide your animals with proper food, shelter, care and protection from the weather. The Mass. SPCA warns that failure to provide this care and protection can result in court action with fines up to $500, a year in jail, or both.

The Mass. SPCA reminds people everywhere to give the family pet protection and adequate shade on broiling hot days, and also provide easily accessible fresh water at all times.

If anyone learns of animals' being neglected as to proper shelter, food and protection from the elements, report such violations immediately to the Mass. SPCA.

THE HOLIDAY SITUATION

The next state holiday in Mass. will be Sat., July 4, Independence Day, a natl. holiday, Sec. of State John Savoren said.

He said his office had received many inquiries concerning 1971 holidays. Long-range planners, including educational leaders and recreation officials, have repeatedly called to ask about next year's schedule.

In 1971, Mass. and the rest of the nation will note 5 so-called Monday holidays. They are as follows:

Washington's Birthday, 3rd Monday in Feb.

Memorial Day, last Monday in May.

Labor Day, 1st Monday in Sept.

Columbus Day, 2nd Monday in Oct.

Veterans' Day, 4th Monday in Oct.

Davoren said a very useful booklet on the 1970 holiday situation, with a brief explanation of "Sunday Laws," may be obtained from the Govt. Dept., Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce, 125 High St., Boston, Mass. 02110.

STUDENT EXCHANGE FROM PLYMOUTH TO PLYMOUTH

Commissioner Carroll P. Sheehan announces that an interchange between teachers and pupils of Plymouth, England and Plymouth, Mass. has been coordinated by the Dept. of Commerce and Development.

A representative of the Dept. at the recent Mayflower '70 celebrations in England, honoring Mass. during the opening week, contacted Mr. J.F. Chadderton, supervisor of ed. in Plymouth, England. He corresponded with Mrs. Mercia C. Pike, elementary supervisor of Plymouth, Mass.

The interchange will start at the grade 4 level, with an interchange of tape recordings, pictures, maps, textbooks and letters.

Both school systems, with name, heritage and history in common, indicate that the interchange will help children realize the full significance of the 350th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims in the New World and to foster lasting friendships.

PUBLIC UTILITIES SHOULD CHANGE THEIR PITCH

NOTHING IS UNLIMITED

"It is not even theoretically possible to double our electrical output every 10 years — within a few decades we will come flat up against the hard reality of our finite environment."

This was the crux of the testimony of Allen H. Morgan, exec. v.p. of the Mass. Audubon Society, at the June 15 hearings before the Senate Subcommittee on Intergovt. Relations, chaired by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie.

Morgan, Sen. Ed Kennedy, Governors Francis W. Sargent of Mass. and Kenneth Curtis of Maine and conservation and power industry leaders were among those presenting their views on Senate Bill 2752, the Power Development and Environment Protection Act. The bill would set up a comparative intergovt. approach to planning and developing reliable electric power, at the same time protecting the public's health and safety and the area's environment.

Mass. Audubon's Morgan, while acknowledging that the need for electric power would increase, urged this increase be gradually leveled off.

"I know of no single instance among living things where normal growth is not carefully programmed, regulated and when the organism (or population) is mature, is not leveled off and stopped. When this does not happen, the net result is pathological and the organism (or population) dies.

"As a public service industry that pretends to social consciousness and public responsibility," said Morgan, "the power industries must get the public used to the fact it is not a divine right to expect electricity will open its tin cans, sharpen pencils or even air-condition its homes — ad infinitum."

He gloomily noted that the electrical industry spends less than 1/4 of 1% of its income on research and 7 times more than that urging the public to increase their power consumption.

Morgan added, "Our environmental assets used in the processes of production of any and every sort must be returned to the public domain in the same condition in which they were originally found by our private enterprise system. They must, in effect, be borrowed and then returned undamaged. And the cost must be borne by the consumer of electricity, or whatever particular product is involved, not by the public as a whole."

Morgan also urged care in selecting sites for new power plants, and overall planning to promote the creation and use of utility corridors to explore the total environmental effects of a power plant.

JUNIOR FORESTER'S CLASS FOR BOYS

Registration for the 1970 Jr. Foresters' Institute (JFI) at the U of Maine is open for rising 11th and 12th grade boys, and current graduates.

Classes scheduled for the 1970 2-week program include an exploration of the several branches of forestry and wildlife management. The 2nd week will be devoted to actual field work at the U of Maine's Camp Ashman, on Long Lake, Princeton, Me.

JFI will be held July 19-Aug. 1. The total on-campus cost is $125. This fee includes tuition, board and room, supervision, insurance, etc.

Additional info and JFI application forms may be obtained from the nonprofit sponsoring organization, Scientists of Tomorrow, P.O. Box 1349, Portland, Oregon 97207.

SOCIAL SECURITY INFO--USE THE PHONE

Your social security office is as close as your telephone. In Springfield, the telephone number is 781-2420.

Thus, Mr. Daniel J. Murphy, Jr., s.s. dist. manager in Springfield, described the latest technique developed by his office to provide more convenient service to residents of the Greater Springfield area.

"We are now equipped to handle most s.s. 'business' by phone," Mr. Murphy explained. "We can help fill out your applic. for benefits in many instances over the phone, and then mail the form to you for sig.; we can accept change-of-address info from beneficiaries, and, of course, we can answer specific questions about the s.s. program, including Medicare, over the phone."

Mr. Murphy suggested that people who have business with the s.s. office take advantage of this phone service. "Call first," he urged. "It may save you a trip to the office."

All copy for this newspaper must be typed, double spaced originals. No carbons, or items which appear elsewhere before we publish, will be considered. Deadline, Monday A.M.

ACCENT ON LIVING, FREE TO HANDICAPPED

Handicapped people who are low on funds can get a free subscription to a valuable self-help idea magazine published by a nonprofit corporation called Accent On Living, Inc. "The idea of Accent," says editor Ray Cheever, himself in a wheelchair, "is to print only the practical kind of info and ideas that can actually help physically handicapped individuals do things easier."

"A good example is a specific procedure for getting from your wheelchair to your car by yourself, and then getting your wheelchair into the car easily. Another example is all of the helpful ideas and products that make it possible and even easy for a housewife to continue taking care of her home and family in spite of a disabling injury or illness, such as arthritis." The approach taken by Accent is that the ideas come from handicapped people who really know how to do these things because they do them every day and they are living successful lives.

A new manual containing hundreds of aids to independent living is just one of the services included in the current issue and is still another example of the specialized helpful information edited for Accent On Living.

Anyone can get info by writing to: The Editor, Accent On Living Magazine, P.O. Box 726, Bloomington, Illinois 61701.

Now is the season when mosquitoes dig you the most. Mosquitoes are attracted to you by black, dark blue or red clothes. Or it could be they love the scent of your perfume or after-shave lotion, the Mass. Med. Soc. points out.

1970 FOCUS-OUTDOORS ON AMHERST CAMPUS

"The 1970 focus: outdoors," a three-day natural history conference sponsored by the Massachusetts Audubon Society and its Arcadia Wildlife Sanctuary, will be held July 31 through Aug. 2 on the campus of the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

The three days will feature lectures, by David Brower, head of the new environmental action group Friends of the Earth, Roger Caras, author, TV personality, and authority on wild animals and lands, Cleveland Grant, respected nature cinematographer, and Lorus and Margey Milne, distinguished ecologists, authors and nature photographers.

Over the three days, participants can attend lectures chosen from 26 included in the 1970 nature college. Subjects range from the ecology of a tree to wildlife on an urban lot, animal origins of human behavior to construction of a birch bark canoe and population ethic. The staff of the Massachusetts Audubon Society will be on hand to share their wide-ranging specialties, and four major exhibits will include a hall of conservation action, nature photographs, a book display by MAS book consultant and sketches and drawings by Audubon artist Russell Buzzell.

Field Trips
Conservation and geology field trips in the surrounding Connecticut Valley will be offered, and six meals, and two nights lodging are included in the basic price for the conference.

The extended weekend offers the most inexpensive, "total-participation" nature. Besides attending lectures and demonstration by top ecologists, naturalists and conservationists, Focus participants can casually chat with them over meals and campus strolls, and find others with similar interests and concerns. Those wishing an information brochure and registration should write Focus, Arcadia, Easthampton, 01027.

CONSIDER THE NON SMOKER

Eating a hamburger enveloped in somebody else's cloud of cigarette smoke is no fun for anyone.

A little consideration for the nonsmoker is a trend starting to take shape. Smokers are getting the message that their smoke pollutes the atmosphere of those around them. Especially in crowded places.

The social pressure on smokers is building fast. Some airlines are sensing the trend and flying with it. Action on Smoking and Health (ASH) has filed petitions with appropriate gov't. agencies to require airlines to establish no-smoking areas in planes. John Banzhaf, the prime mover at ASH, also plans to push for curbs on smoking in restaurants, meeting rooms and elevators, plus enforcement of violated no-smoking rules in sections of trains.

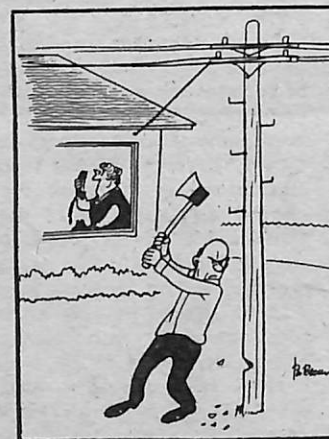

One tactic Banzhaf may encourage is lawsuits on behalf of persons claiming their privacy or health is affected by smoke.

National legislation to restrict smoking aboard public transportation has already been introduced. Similar proposals are pending in some state legislatures. And three professional hockey teams have even banned smoking during games at their home rinks. The Wash., D.C. Medical Society has asked its 3,000 members to ban smoking in their offices.

This month, Christmas Seal associations across the country are making a united effort to urge smokers to kick the habit. Kicking the habit is the ultimate expression of consideration for the nonsmokers. And for the smoker's own lungs and health.

If you still smoke, ask your local Christmas Seal assn. for 2 leaflets, Me Quit Smoking, Why? and Me Quit Smoking, How? Get in touch with Hampden-Berkshire TB & RD Assoc., 284 State St., Spfld., 737-3506.

MASSACHUSETTS CASH BALANCE

Mass. completed its business for the 11th month of the current fiscal year with a cash balance of $18,669,379, State Treas. Crane noted today in his May report on the financial condition of the Commonwealth.

The April cash balance of $36.5 million was reduced to $18.6 million because of the month's increase in disbursements over total receipts. The report shows total receipts of $356.4 million but total disbursements of $374.3 million.

The state's total bonded indebtedness continued at more than a billion dollars, Crane's latest report states. He reports a total bonded indebtedness as of June 1 as $1,034,452,000, seven million dollars more than the $1,027,374,000 figure of June 1, 1969.

YOUR UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

(Answers to the following questions apply to Mass. and Federal Unemployment Insurance only.)

Q. My husband will be getting laid off in 2 weeks for lack of work. How much will he be entitled to in unemployment benefits?

A. That depends on how much he earned in the 52 weeks prior to the week he files his claim. The maximum weekly amount now is $62 plus $6 dependency allowance for each child under age 18, who is dependent upon him for support. There is a limit on dependency allowances, however; they may not exceed 50% of the weekly benefit amount.

A. My employer has gone out of business and left the state. How will this affect my claim for unemployment compensation?

A. It may delay your checks if he doesn't furnish the Employment Security Division with the statement of your wages which is requested when you file your claim. In that case, the employment office may ask you to furnish proof of your wages, such as, pay slips, W-2 Forms, etc. Chances are that your employer's accountant will have the necessary information and you won't have any delay in your checks.

Nature's Ways

by Wayne Hanley

The anonymous Chinaman who shot his mouth off about the value of pictures compared to words never had seen a redwood tree.

Otherwise, he might have uttered something profound. Indeed, he might have said there are things which neither words nor pictures really convey.

One of those things that leave the wordsmith and lensmen helpless is the redwood tree. After having thumbed through pounds of post cards, hundredweights of Sierra Club volumes, ogled thousands of color slides and hours of flickers — all concerning redwood trees — I recently stepped into a redwood grove in northern California. I was utterly unprepared for the experience.

While I am at a loss to tell you the impression it created in me, I can say that for the first time I understand, at least vicariously, the enthusiasm the old-time River Baptists had for breaking the ice in February and dunking a few new converts.

Later when I stepped out of the grove and watched the seemingly endless line of trucks rumble by with redwood logs — some of the logs appearing as large as three-bedroom houses — I, too, knew that the world was not yet cleansed of sinners.

If you should yearn for a hegira that will take you outside your narrow hide, the route between Mecca and Medina travels through the Jedediah Smith Redwoods, the Del Norte Coast Redwoods, the Prairie Creek Redwoods and the Humboldt Redwoods — all California state parks.

Since there is no spiritual means of conveying the meaning of a redwood tree 350 feet high, one is forced to quote statistics, such as the fact that one tree of that dimension contains enough board-feet of lumber to build 25 three-bedroom houses and completely furnish them with furniture. Nor is there any adequate method of interpreting the redwood grove other than by saying that one acre in the Founder's Grove equals 1,600,000 board-feet of lumber.

In a belt that extended 450 miles north and south and 40 miles wide, there once grew 2,000,000 acres of mature redwoods. Today, fewer than 50,000 acres of virgin redwoods are protected within California state parks. Another 250,000 acres of old-growth redwoods are in commercial hands, open to lumbering.

There are people who own highway construction equipment who feel that a superhighway should be run through parts of this preserved remnant of a once mighty forest. There are people who own saws who denounce those who would save the remnant as "extremists."

It can be said that some of the more magnificent groves now under protection were saved by lumber companies. Some of these companies held groves free from the axe for 20 years or more while awaiting the uncertain outcome of money drives by the Save the Redwoods League, which resulted in purchase. Oddly, none of these firms which saved groves bore the names of those lumber companies which have been loudest in proclaiming their public service motives. All that I heard were obscure mills whose names are known only to the buyers for lumberyards.

NIH THE SEARCH FOR HEALTH

A REPORT FROM THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH
BETHESDA, MARYLAND

Dental Combat Zone

Oral diseases are as old as man. Evidence of decay of the teeth and periodontal disorders has been found in the most ancient of human skulls.

Scientists at the National Institute of Dental Research, National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Maryland, have shown that certain forms of tooth decay and periodontal destruction are related to specific types of bacteria found in most people's mouths. These bacteria are able to attach themselves to the teeth, where they grow and multiply into increasingly larger colonies called plaque.

Plaque develops constantly in the mouth and is very adhesive. Although difficult to detect because it is colorless and transparent, plaque sometimes accumulates so heavily that it can be seen as whitish mats.

Plaque plays a big role in tooth decay, and certain strains of bacteria are especially active in forming it. When these bacteria come in contact with ordinary sugar in various foods and beverages, they produce gummy substances called dextrans which enable plaque to stick to the teeth. Once plaque is established on the teeth, more bacteria lodge in this sticky film, reproduce, and manufacture acids which attack tooth enamel. The enamel is eventually dissolved by the acid, and bacteria from the plaque actually invade the underlying dentin to continue the destruction of the tooth.

Bacteria in plaque begin producing acid within a few seconds after a person eats any food which contains sugar, and continues the process for long periods of time, thereby prolonging destructive action long after sweets are actually in the mouth.

A progressive accumulation of bacterial plaque on the teeth, along the gum line, is also responsible for the most prevalent form of periodontal disease, which attacks gums and bone supporting the teeth. Scientists have found that the accumulation of plaque in this area leads to the development of periodontal disease through a chain of events. (1) The gum tissues become inflamed and are likely to bleed. (2) Bacterial plaque closest to the tooth surface is converted into a hard deposit called tartar or calculus. (3) Fibers that fasten the gums to the teeth are eventually attacked and destroyed. The gums slowly separate from the teeth, leaving pockets or spaces between gums and teeth which fill with bacteria and inflammatory cells. (4) The disease process reaches the bone that supports the teeth; the teeth become loose and finally fall out.

Although periodontal disease is often thought to be a disease of older persons, the early stages of this infection can be seen even in children. Since the disease starts early in life, the time to prevent it also is early in life. The way to prevent it is through the control of plaque.

Both prevention of initial plaque infection and control of existing infections require that one follow a simple program of wise eating habits and regular, effective removal of bacterial deposits from all tooth surfaces.

phate concentration." The International Joint Commission on the Pollution of Lakes Erie, Ontario, and the St. Lawrence River, stated that detergent sources account for 70% of the phosphorous in municipal wastes in the United States, and 50% in Canada. Phosphates in laundering soaps and detergents have been implicated as water pollutants, since they stimulate the excessive growth of algae in our lakes and streams.

Culligan, through its water conditioning dealers, is now marketing a phosphate-free laundry soap for use in soft or softened water. This soap is not only phosphate free, but is also rapidly biodegradable. It breaks down naturally in three days, after disposal to waterways, as compared to about three weeks for the present-day synthetic laundry detergents. Laundering experts have long considered soap and softened water as a superior and economical cleaning combination. Thus, commercial and institutional laundries have used this combination for many years. They find that softened water provides excellent cleaning with less soap, and in addition, lengthens fabric life.

Today, it is really easy to have softened water for all household uses. Modern water softening appliances are compact and automatic, and can be quickly connected to the household water supply to provide completely softened water wherever desired.

By using softened water and Culligan phosphate-free soap, every family can join in the fight against pollution and, at the same time, enjoy the many ways in which high quality water contributes to better living. ## What is a solar eclipse?

An eclipse of the sun is called a solar eclipse. It occurs when the moon passes directly between the sun and earth. As seen from various points on the earth, the moon blocks out the sun. A total eclipse of the sun occurs only when the sun, moon, and earth are in a straight line. You might expect this to happen once a month. But because of the tilt of the moon's orbit, it happens only about twice a year.

How long do insects live?

There is no average length of life for adult insects as a group. The life of one kind of insect may be very short. Most adult moths and butterflies live for only a few days or weeks. Some insects live for one summer; some live for several years. Probably the insect with the longest life is the queen of one kind of termite that lives in the tropics. Some scientists think this queen termite may live for as long as 50 years.

Why do we have Easter eggs?

The egg has symbolized renewed life since ancient days. The egg is said to be a symbol of life because in all living creatures life begins in the egg. The Persians and Egyptians also colored eggs and ate them during their new year's celebration, which came in the spring.

What is the origin of the clef signs?

The clef signs come from the old Gothic letters C, F, and G, which were placed on certain lines of the staff to indicate the pitch of that line and, consequently, the pitch of the remaining lines and spaces. The word "clef," which is a French word, comes from the Latin clavis, or "key." The signs were called keys because they unlocked the secrets of the staff.

What To Know Before Buying A Diamond

The purchase of a diamond — either as an engagement ring or as a special gift of love — is a momentous occasion in every man's life. Because of this, and because it will represent a significant sum of money, he will want to buy wisely and proudly. The American Gem Society, a non-profit association of gemologists and professional jewelers, offers the following advice to the most often asked questions.

Q. Is there a standard for establishing the price of a diamond?

A. Just as a suit of clothes can cost anywhere from $50 to $200, a diamond's price may vary too depending on size and quality. Jewelers use what is called the "Four C's" to determine price — Cutting, Color, Clarity and Carat Weight.

Q. What is the most important factor in the beauty of a diamond?

A. American Gem Society jewelers rank Cutting first since that much admired "fire" and brilliance of the diamond is revealed only when it is scientifically cut to correct proportions and with each facet highly polished. Poorly cut stones permit "light leakage" and have a dulled lifeless appearance.

Q. What is meant by the color of a diamond?

A. Nearly all gem diamonds have some slight yellowish body color. The degree of this color as it varies from "Colorless" or clear white to yellowish, affects the price you pay.

Q. Is clarity an important factor in the price of a diamond?

A. Clarity is one of the factors affecting diamond value. American Gem Society jewelers point out that minute inclusions seen only under 10-power magnification do not mar the beauty of the gem nor endanger durability, but will reduce the cost. Flaws which are visible to the eye obviously mar the diamond's beauty and may make it more fragile.

Q. What do the terms "Blue White" and "Perfect" mean?

A. Blue White refers to the body color of a diamond that shows a bluish cast. However, statistics have shown that one gem diamond in 500 will have this hue. This term has been so abused that it is seldom used by ethical jewelers. "Perfect" in jewelers' parlance means that a diamond is flawless (only) under magnification. A diamond so described may have inferior cutting and color, with a seriously reduced value, but technically may be called "perfect" since no flaws were in evidence. Since it is a misleading word, many jewelers such as those in the American Gem Society do not use the term.

Salt, pepper

Combine string beans, toast and egg. Add salt, pepper and onion flakes to taste. Shape into patties. Place in non-stick skillet and cover. Heat until brown on one side. Cut cheese into pieces the size of a patty. Remove cover from pan and turn the patties and place cheese on top of each. Recover and heat until cheese is melted. Makes 1 serving.
